Regulatory Reform Task Force Progress Report

Under the Executive Order, the RRTF is charged to provide a report to the Administrator by May 26 detailing our progress on implementation of regulatory reform initiatives and identifying regulations for repeal, replacement, or modification. A schedule for future reports will be determined by the Administrator. We are operating under the assumption that the initial progress report would have the general outline shown below.

Proposed outline of initial progress report to the Administrator

The timeline for doing the stakeholder outreach and assembling an initial progress report is already rather tight, so please let us know if you have any questions or concerns about these plans or would like to discuss anything further. Thank you.

However, we're awaiting the greenlight from John Konkus to post some social media pointing people to the release which also points folks to this page: https://www.epa.gov/laws-regulations/regulatory-reform which would ultimately help this person.

We would like to respond to an inquiry we received through @EPALand, asking about the May 9th EO 13777 public meeting location (see message below).

If we post a reply and others begin to post comments on Twitter, does that create Public Comments for the record?

Any suggestions on how best to answer the inquiry in a timely manner via social media is much appreciated.

Below are her notes; attached are the handouts from the meeting as well. Let us know if you need more information. Nicole Notes from last Friday's SBA/Advocacy Environmental Roundtable Pre-meeting I talked with Dave Rostker (SBA/Advocacy) for a couple minutes: •□□□□□□□ He is setting up a meeting with Brittany (and hopefully Samantha) as a follow-up to Kevin's meeting. He wants to establish a working relationship and find common ground on how best to get programs to provide more timely and relevant information into the Panel process. • • • • • • • • He believes WOTUS should conduct a Panel. •□□□□□□□ He thinks we should be watching those reg reform bills in Congress. If indirect impacts and positive impacts come into play for RFA, then his belief is there will be a lot of Panels for de-regulatory actions. (Even aside from the bills, his comments during the roundtable imply that he believes that panels should occur for deregulatory rules)

First half of meeting was on the TSCA 6a Paint Removers proposal. The presentation by EPA/OCSPP staff (with no stopping for questions) went right up to the hour mark so they only took a couple questions at the end. There were a couple clarifying questions. One person from a law firm (not sure what industry he represented) asked why EPA is not extending the comment period to coincide with the proposed rule on NMP in furniture refinishing comment period, since EPA plans to finalize both proposals as one final rule. OCSPP basically gave a non-answer referencing that they need to await political management input.

Charley Maresca (SBA/Advocacy) opened up by talking about how he believes there now exists a great opportunity to lessen the regulatory burden on small business.

| Dave Rostker followed up with lengthy opening remarks of his own: |
| • □ □ □ □ □ Past changes in administrations that focused on regulatory reform did not have far reaching impacts that they hoped for because they didn't bring the agencies to the table as a working partner. |
| •□□□□□□ The OIRA guidance translates campaign rhetoric (from EO 13771) into concrete incentives for agencies to implement regulatory reform (cutting regulatory costs on business in order to get to implementation of each agencies' individual priorities). |
| •□□□□□□□ EO 13777 gives/empowers the new leadership in each agency with the ability to think creatively about where to find cost savings. |
| •□□□□□□ Risks for small business still there small businesses are disproportionately impacted by regulations and so can be disproportionately impacted by deregulation. |
| •□□□□□□ At EPA, SBREFA Panels continue to go on in this deregulatory climate because we want to make sure that small businesses are not disadvantaged by deregulatory actions while looking for cost savings to the whole economy. |
| •□□□□□□ Advocacy is attempting contact with all the agencies in order to establish a process by which we can influence the selection of and prioritization of cost savings and deregulatory activities. |
| •□□□□□□□ Last week the chief counsel sent a letter to all agencies asking them to identify their RRO and update their list of the Regulatory Policy Officers (12866 official). |
| •□□□□□□ Today we want to understand what small businesses are thinking about, both short term (90 day list) but also long term as these EOs and their ideas will continue on past the 90 days. |

| Dave: That is exactly Advocacy's concern because the EO 13771 doesn't mention small business. Advocacy is discussing that imbalance with OIRA. Small business should not be disadvantaged by reforms that benefit large businesses. Small Businesses voice should not get drowned out. Q from Theresa Pugh (consultant representing electric utility industry): Can Advocacy give us a the list of all the Agencies' Regulatory Reform Officers and Task Force members? And will there be some kind of outreach from the agencies to listen to us small businesses? Dave: I know EPA will be doing that type of thing at various levels in the agency. For example I am working on figuring out New Source Review (NSR) reform. It is clearly something that needs significant attention. Want to leverage agency expertise and industry expertise to build a solution that reaches across lines and results in significant improvements. 3-4 year process of hard detailed in the trenches work but will have lasting impact. Q from NAHB: Can you give us the list of RROs so we don't have to go to each agency and spend time trying to figure out the right person to talk to when a lot of the political team is not even in place yet. Ex. 5 - Deliberative Process Theresa Pugh (consultant representing electric utility industry) asked other trades if any want to join a letter she would draft to Dom Mancini requesting that that info is made public, so industry knows who | •□□□□□□□ We are trying to think longer term, not just the 2 for 1 accounting exercise, not just cost savings as what's needed to get to the next regulation, but rather how small business can remake their relationship with the regulators. Educate policy makers to remake processes for long term impacts. We saw some of that in the comments sent to Commerce related to the manufacturing EO. |

Joan Rogers (EPA's Small Business Ombudsman) announced the OSDBU will be hosting a listening session/hearing at EPA on April 25th and to contact her if any trade associations or small businesses would like a spot on the agenda.

Q from trade assoc: What is new in the latest OMB guidance to agencies?

Dave: Agencies can claim cost savings very broadly from things like interpretive actions and ICR actions, but only has to use those cost savings to offset 'significant' regulatory actions. But again he urged folks in the room to not focus so much on 13771 which he described as an management exercise between ORIA and the agencies, but rather on 13777 for bigger picture reg reform. Focus on things that make small business life easier, don't worry about 'cost savings' as the accounting exercise.

Q from Trade Assoc: Is there any uniform process that is being established for the agencies collecting input?

Dave: No common process, many agencies are still figuring it out. Advocacy can serve as your conduit for your ideas.

Q from trade assoc.: Did the clock start for the 90 days in EO 13777 or is it still set to start?

Dave: Yes the clock started. You may not be able to tell from the outside, but I do know EPA is taking the EO seriously and is making good progress. Can't speak for other agencies.

Theresa Pugh brought up that she was happy that EPA is revisiting the methane rule, in particular the leak detection and repair provisions affecting the compressor stations and pipelines. She thought the 30 day if reasonable requirement was ridiculous, and not good for the electric utility industry. The requirement timeframe was entirely too fast, not recognizing practical real-world issues. "You don't want to be repairing planes while they are flying." She thinks EPA doesn't understand the operational realities for small business in many regulations, but especially in the area of leak detection and repair requirements.

Dave and Tabby asked if there were any more specific regulations that would be good candidates for revisiting. No one brought up any more. Charley said there seems to be more interest in talking about the EO process rather than specific rules and we can do that. He asked if anyone in the room wanted to offer up what type of things they sent to Commerce already, and asked if folks have plans for submitting anything to the agencies and could share what their plans are and their timeline for doing that. staff at EPA and to Advocacy. And she will plan on having at least one of her clients attend OSDBU's hearing and testify. •□□□□□□ NAHB said they plan on speaking at the EPA/OSDBU hearing about their ongoing concerns (their concerns have not changed because the EOs are on the table), they view it as another tool in their toolbox to affect reg reform. • 🗆 🗆 🗅 🗅 Electronics manufacturers trade assoc did file comments with Commerce. They put forth 10 rules, 5 of them EPA. Will also attend and testify at the OSDBU hearing. One specific concern is Definition of Solid Waste. The undoing of what they thought of as a very beneficial 2008 rule, and the adding of additional restrictions. They felt it gutted DSW, especially for smaller companies. Related and more specific to the electronics industry was a Carol Browner/Common Sense Initiative rule that would stop calling the waste metal back plating baths that are laden with copper (in printed circuit board manufacturing and electroplating) hazardous wastes. They were working with EPA on the rule (F0006?), but then the rule was pulled got rolled into DSW which was okay, but then DSW got gutted with the new administration's latest rule. So our suggestion is to either fix DSW (which could benefit a multitude of industries by addressing the beneficial uses issue) or implement a more tailored rule that addresses our issue specifically. • 🗆 🗆 🗅 🗅 Association of Global Automakers said they are developing a package of reg reforms and vetting it with their membership now. They will then present it to the various agencies. • • • • • Home Furnishings Alliance brought up the December formaldehyde rule. Effective date has been delayed, but they believe the compliance deadlines are tied to the final reg and not necessarily the effective date. Have been working with OIRA and EPA staff, but not getting very far with EPA staff because the political team is not in place yet. Another broader issue and something they feel EPA did in the rulemaking that was outside the statutory scope, was to include composite wood products defined as articles under TSCA. This creates a whole other

• 🗆 🗅 🗅 Dave responded perhaps that is something to bring up with EPA since delaying level of burden, especially on the import side.

compliance could serve as a 'cost savings.'

| • • • • • Home Furnishing Alliance also brought up that the Administrator had some leeway to |
|---|
| grant some exemptions in that rule but did not. They are the only industry that submitted new |
| studies to support/validate exemptions and they would like to see those revisited. |

Dave wants to make sure everyone knows that the intent is to comply with all procedural processes (APA, RFA, etc.) for any deregulatory actions, the same as if they are regulatory actions.

All told we have received more than 1400 suggestions from inside and outside the agency, and these can be made available to you if you are interested. added in the intervening years. Subject: Planning for stakeholder meetings to support implementation of EO 13777

Hi Justin,

As you know, Executive Order 13777 requires agencies to form a Regulatory Reform Task Force to evaluate existing regulations and make recommendations to the agency head regarding their repeal, replacement or modification. The EO also directs the Regulatory Reform Task Force, in the course of its evaluations, to seek input from state, local and tribal governments, small businesses, consumers, NGOs and trade associations.

Ex. 5 - Deliberative Process

A number of years ago EPA was similarly tasked to meet with stakeholders to get broad input on our regulations. At that time the Agency chose to hold one big meeting with breakout sessions to cover specific statutes and/or media. This approach was well received by stakeholders and provided excellent input. It was also less expensive and more efficient for EPA and stakeholders alike. In that prior event, OP coordinated the planning for the meeting and breakout sessions.

- 1. It might be helpful to again ask OP to coordinate planning for the meeting(s).
- 2. It could be more cost effective for both the stakeholders and the Agency to consider having one meeting with breakout sessions rather than having each office host separate meetings. With this format, stakeholders could contribute ideas to more than one program at one time. In addition, depending on the location of affected stakeholders, the agency may want to consider meeting formats that allow for remote participation.

The Alternative Dispute Resolution Law Office (ADRLO) can assist by providing expertise in the design of public meetings and through our contract, can provide access to expert contractors to facilitate and handle logistics for public meetings. The Cross-Cutting Law Office (CCILO) can provide counseling on the extent to which FACA may apply and how to plan appropriately in light of FACA requirements.

Please let me know if you need additional information and/or how ADRLO may assist.

Best,

Jeanne

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

April 11, 2017

Regulatory Reform Underway at EPA

WASHINGTON -- As a vital step of EPA's implementation of President Trump's Executive Order, "Enforcing the Regulatory Reform Agenda," EPA's Regulatory Reform Task Force, led by the Office of Policy, submitted a Federal Register notice today to solicit public comments on EPA regulations.

"We are supporting the restoration of America's economy through extensive reviews of the misaligned regulatory actions from the past administration. The previous administration abused the regulatory process to advance an ideological agenda that expanded the reach of the federal government, often dismissing the technological and economic concerns raised by the regulated community and duplicating long-standing regulations by states and localities. Moving forward, EPA will be listening to those directly impacted by regulations, and learning ways we can work together with our state and local partners, to ensure that we can provide clean air, land, and water to Americans," said Administrator Scott Pruitt.

The notice will include a docket that all EPA program offices will use to collect comments specific to their issues. EPA's Regulatory Reform Task Force is simultaneously working with program offices to gather their recommendations for specific rules that should be considered for repeal, replacement or modification. EPA regional offices, program offices, and other officials will report back by May 15, 2017.

EPA also launched a new webpage with information related to the agency's regulatory reform efforts, which will include a list of upcoming meetings being held by the offices at: https://www.epa.gov/lawsregulations/regulatory-reform. The docket number for public input is EPA-HQ-OA-2017-0190.

Hi.

Attached is a draft for review. The first few pages contain a mock-up of the site, the last few pages contain editable text.

At this point, no press releases should have gone out with the link, they are supposed to get those cleared with us.

We're happy to talk about this draft if you have any questions,

Nicole

EX. 5 - Deliberative Process Unlike EO 13777, EO 13783 does not direct EPA to undertake any public outreach, and does not directly implicate the Regulatory Review Task Force. EO 13783 does require us to submit a plan to OMB by May 12 indicating how we will carry out reviews of energy regulations, and requires a draft report to the Vice President by July 26 that will include specific recommendations that could alleviate or eliminate aspects of agency actions that burden domestic energy production.

Subject: Planning for stakeholder meetings to support implementation of EO 13777

Hi Justin,

As you know, Executive Order 13777 requires agencies to form a Regulatory Reform Task Force to evaluate existing regulations and make recommendations to the agency head regarding their repeal, replacement or modification. The EO also directs the Regulatory Reform Task Force, in the course of its evaluations, to seek input from state, local and tribal governments, small businesses, consumers, NGOs and trade associations.

Ex. 5 - Deliberative Process

A number of years ago EPA was similarly tasked to meet with stakeholders to get broad input on our regulations. At that time the Agency chose to hold one big meeting with breakout sessions to cover specific statutes and/or media. This approach was well received by stakeholders and provided excellent input. It was also less expensive and more efficient for EPA and stakeholders alike. In that prior event, OP coordinated the planning for the meeting and breakout sessions.

- 1. It might be helpful to again ask OP to coordinate planning for the meeting(s).
- 2. It could be more cost effective for both the stakeholders and the Agency to consider having one meeting with breakout sessions rather than having each office host separate meetings. With this format, stakeholders could contribute ideas to more than one program at one time. In addition, depending on the location of affected stakeholders, the agency may want to consider meeting formats that allow for remote participation.

The Alternative Dispute Resolution Law Office (ADRLO) can assist by providing expertise in the design of public meetings and through our contract, can provide access to expert contractors to facilitate and handle logistics for public meetings. The Cross-Cutting Law Office (CCILO) can provide counseling on the extent to which FACA may apply and how to plan appropriately in light of FACA requirements.

Please let me know if you need additional information and/or how ADRLO may assist.

This outreach took a variety of forms over the years. All told we have received more than 1400 suggestions from inside and outside the agency, and these can be made available to you if you are interested. |

Subject: Planning for stakeholder meetings to support implementation of EO 13777

Hi Justin,

As you know, Executive Order 13777 requires agencies to form a Regulatory Reform Task Force to evaluate existing regulations and make recommendations to the agency head regarding their repeal, replacement or modification. The EO also directs the Regulatory Reform Task Force, in the course of its evaluations, to seek input from state, local and tribal governments, small businesses, consumers, NGOs and trade associations.

Ex. 5 - Deliberative Process

A number of years ago EPA was similarly tasked to meet with stakeholders to get broad input on our regulations. At that time the Agency chose to hold one big meeting with breakout sessions to cover specific statutes and/or media. This approach was well received by stakeholders and provided excellent input. It was also less expensive and more efficient for EPA and stakeholders alike. In that prior event, OP coordinated the planning for the meeting and breakout sessions.

- 1. It might be helpful to again ask OP to coordinate planning for the meeting(s).
- 2. It could be more cost effective for both the stakeholders and the Agency to consider having one meeting with breakout sessions rather than having each office host separate meetings. With this format, stakeholders could contribute ideas to more than one program at one time. In addition, depending on the location of affected stakeholders, the agency may want to consider meeting formats that allow for remote participation.
